What is Domestic Abuse?

Abuse between romantic partners—known as domestic abuse or intimate partner violence—can take many forms. It can be overt, such as physical violence, or subtle, such as controlling a partner through emotional, financial, or other forms of manipulation.

Common Reactions to Abuse

depression, including suicidal thoughts	resentment, anger, and aggression	fear of the abusive partner	uncertainty about how to escape abuse
denial that abuse is occurring	substance use	anxiety, shame, and self-blame	social withdrawal

My People Stay in Abusive Relationships

Fear	Rationalization
The abuser may threaten suicide, or threaten	The victim may believe they deserve the to harm children, pets, or property, if the	abuse, tell themselves it's "not so bad", feel victim leaves. The victim may fear more	the relationship is otherwise good, or believe severe abuse if they are caught trying to	the abuser will someday stop their abusive leave.	behavior.
Financial Limitations	Cultural Stigma
Abusers may prevent the victim from	The victim may be part of a culture in which working, control their money, or threaten to	abuse is accepted or divorce is strongly steal their possessions. Many victims face	discouraged. They may risk losing friends homelessness, or may struggle to support	and family if they attempt to leave an children, if they leave.	abusive relationship.

Abuse is widespread, and both men and women may be victims. About 1 in 4 women and 1 in 7 men report experiencing severe physical violence from an intimate partner in their lifetime.

Abuse is never the victim's fault. Though the abuser may try to blame the victim, the abuser is responsible for their actions. Anger issues or a desire for power and control may lead to abuse.

Domestic abuse doesn't require marriage or cohabitation. It can also happen among those who are dating, divorced, have a child together, or live separately.

Abuse doesn't discriminate. People of any race, gender, or economic status can commit or experience abuse.

For confidential help available 24/7 in the United States, call the National Domestic Violence Hotline at 1-800-799-7233 or visit www.thehotline.org.